8 PARISH MATTERS

The War Memorial

Members considered what action might be taken as a result of an incident at the end of July when the War Memorial was treated by a large group of university aged young men and women as a climbing frame. The Clerk reported that Ciaran Mcguire, a reporter with The Cornishman, had undertaken to publish an article in the newspaper together with a photograph with a view to identifying the offending group. He had further agreed to ask colleagues with The West Briton and The Western Morning News to publish similar articles. If the group can be identified, Councillors agreed to take the matter further. It was noted that the an article referring to this incident has been published in today's West Briton. Members also noted that the Police had been informed, but that in the absence of physical damage to the War Memorial there is little that can be done.

Winter Service Provision

The Clerk reported on Cornwall Council's new policy concerning the provision and maintenance of salt bins which (because this is a discretionary service) will all be withdrawn during the summer of 2011. Parish Councils have been invited to consider whether or not to provide and maintain salt bins once Cornwall Council ceases to provide the service. Following discussion, it was agreed to seek an indication of what a contractor might charge to store and, when necessary, to spread salt.

Parish Design Statement

It was noted that the Parish Council is still no further forward with this project.

The roof of the Adit

CLr Geake reported that Mr Polglase has visited the owners of Adit Cottage and has inspected the roof of the adit. It is his considered opinion that the roof is stable and that there is no need to install the two 'Tell-Tales'. However he does have concerns about the side hedges leading down to the water and in particular the one on the eastern side. CLr Geake's advice was that both hedges would benefit from a general clean and partial rebuilding. It was agreed that an enquiry concerning ownership of the hedge on the eastern side should be made to the owners of The Old Pottery.

The Chairman proposed and it was agreed to consider the business of Agenda Item 9 later in the meeting.
